

Defense of rights: complaints and complaints :

56. I am a posted worker: Where can I seek help if my rights are violated in the Czech republic?

If somebody is a posted worker in the Czech Republic and believes that your rights are being violated, there are several resources and organizations where he can seek help. Here's a guide to the available support:

1. State Labour Inspection Office (Státní úřad inspekce práce - SUIP)

- Role: The SUIP oversees compliance with labor laws, including those related to posted workers. They conduct inspections and can investigate complaints related to violations of labor rights.
- Contact: You can contact the SUIP through their regional offices. Their website provides contact details and information on how to file a complaint.
- Website: State Labour Inspection Office

2. Trade Unions

- Role: Trade unions can provide support and advocacy for workers, including posted workers. They offer legal assistance, advice, and can help address grievances with employers.
- Contact: Join or contact a relevant trade union in your sector. In the construction industry, you might approach unions such as the Czech-Moravian Confederation of Trade Unions (ČMKOS).
- Website: ČMKOS

3. European Consumer Centre (ECC) Czech Republic

- Role: The ECC provides support for cross-border disputes, including issues related to employment and working conditions for posted workers from other EU countries.
- Contact: You can contact the ECC for advice and assistance regarding your rights as a posted worker.
- Website: ECC Czech Republic

4. Labour Court

- Role: If informal resolution methods fail, you may take your case to the Labour Court. The court handles disputes related to employment contracts, wage claims, and other labor rights issues.
- Contact: Seek legal advice to determine the appropriate court and procedure for filing a case.
- Website: Judicial System of the Czech Republic

5. Legal Aid and Advisory Services

- Role: There are legal aid organizations and advisory services that provide free or low-cost legal assistance to workers, including those posted from abroad.
- Contact: Look for local legal aid services or non-governmental organizations (NGOs) that offer support to workers.
- Example: Legal Aid \(Právní pomoc\)

6. Embassy or Consulate

- Role: If you are a posted worker from another country, your country's embassy or consulate in the Czech Republic can offer support and assistance, including helping you understand your rights and resolving issues with your employer.
  - Contact: Reach out to the embassy or consulate of your home country in the Czech Republic.
- 7. European Labour Authority (ELA)
- Role: The ELA supports the enforcement of labor laws and the protection of workers' rights across the EU. They can provide guidance and assistance in cross-border labor disputes.

57. Where can a worker go to report an action by their employer that they consider abusive in the Czech republic?

If a worker in Czechia believes that their employer's actions are abusive or violate labor laws, there are several avenues they can pursue to report and address the issue. Here's a detailed guide on where to go and how to proceed:

1. State Labour Inspection Office (Státní úřad inspekce práce - SUIP)

- Role: The SUIP is responsible for enforcing labor laws and ensuring compliance with regulations. They handle complaints related to abusive practices, such as violations of employment rights, unsafe working conditions, or unfair treatment.
- How to Report: You can file a complaint online, by mail, or in person at a regional SUIP office. Provide detailed information about the abusive actions and any evidence you have.
- Contact: Find the nearest SUIP office and reporting procedures on their website.
- Website: State Labour Inspection Office

2. Trade Unions

- Role: Trade unions advocate for workers' rights and can provide support and representation in cases of abusive practices. They can help mediate disputes with the employer or provide legal assistance.
- How to Report: Contact a relevant trade union in your sector or workplace. They can guide you through the process and support you in addressing the issue.
- Example: Czech-Moravian Confederation of Trade Unions (ČMKOS)
- Website: ČMKOS

3. Labour Court

- Role: If informal resolution methods are unsuccessful, you may bring your case to the Labour Court. The court handles disputes related to employment contracts, wage claims, and other labor-related issues.
- How to Report: Seek legal advice to determine the appropriate court and procedure for filing a claim or lawsuit.
- Website: Judicial System of the Czech Republic

4. Legal Aid and Advisory Services

- Role: Legal aid organizations and advisory services can offer free or low-cost legal assistance for workers facing abusive situations. They provide advice on how to handle the situation and represent you if needed.
- How to Report: Contact local legal aid services or NGOs that specialize in worker rights.

- Example: Legal Aid \(Právní pomoc\)

5. Ombudsman

- Role: The Czech Ombudsman (Public Defender of Rights) can investigate complaints related to abuse or violations of rights. Although their role is broader, they can provide assistance or guidance on where to report issues.
- How to Report: Submit a complaint through their website or contact them directly.
- Website: Czech Ombudsman

6. Health and Safety Authorities

- Role: For issues related to unsafe working conditions or health hazards, you can report the problem to authorities responsible for occupational health and safety.
- How to Report: Contact the relevant health and safety authority or the SUIP for guidance on addressing workplace safety issues.
- Website: State Labour Inspection Office - Health and Safety

7. Embassy or Consulate

- Role: If you are a foreign worker, your home country's embassy or consulate in Czechia can provide support and advice on how to report abusive actions by your employer.
- How to Report: Reach out to your embassy or consulate for assistance and guidance.

Steps to Take

1. Document the Issue: Gather evidence of the abusive actions, including emails, witness statements, and any relevant documentation.
2. Seek Advice: Consult with a trade union, legal advisor, or relevant authority to understand your rights and options.
3. File a Complaint: Submit a formal complaint to the appropriate authority, such as the SUIP, or take legal action if necessary.
4. Follow Up: Keep track of the progress of your complaint and seek further assistance if the issue is not resolved satisfactorily.
